

Heritage Legacy Fund Awards $10,000 Grant to Ktunaxa Nation Government Building in Cranbrook, BC.

Ktunaxa Nation Government Building in Cranbrook, BC was awarded a grant of $10,000 by the Heritage Legacy Fund, a heritage conservation not-for-profit with Heritage BC as fund advisor.

The grant awarded to the Ktunaxa Nation Council in Cranbrook was one of 17 sites across British Columbia that will be receiving grants to repair, restore, and promote historic buildings and other structures.

The Heritage Legacy Fund (HLF) was established in 2003 by the provincial government of British Columbia with an endowment of $5 million, held by the Vancouver Foundation. The fund provides grants for heritage conservation and heritage awareness projects in British Columbia.

Of the over 100 grants provided to date, about 80 per cent have been for the conservation of historic buildings and other structures; from small community halls to civic landmarks such as Victoria's City Hall or the former municipal building in Nelson.

The remaining 20% of grants provided have been for heritage awareness projects including interpretive signage, walking tours, and online applications that increase public understanding, appreciation, and education of built community heritage resources, including Vancouver Heritage Foundation's Vancouver Heritage Register Interactive Map and Hudson's Bay Company Heritage Trail signage.

This year's projects receiving contributions from the Heritage Legacy Fund range from the restoration of the City of Quesnel's iconic Cornish Water Wheel to the exterior restoration of Port Atkinson Lighthouse in West Vancouver.

Don Maki, Facilities and Capital Acquisitions Manager for the Ktunaxa Nation Council Society says the grant funding was used for foundation and flashing repair of the former Cranbrook Central School building, currently used as the Ktunaxa Nation Government Building in Cranbrook. The project was successfully completed in October of 2015. We would like to thank Jim Large of Econobuilt, our contractor, Heritage BC and the Ktunaxa Nation Council for their generous financial support.

Heritage Legacy Fund Committee Chair and Heritage BC Board Member Eric Pattison talks about the range of project applications this year, "The HLF committee was again impressed by the diversity of project applications submitted from around the province. Local communities are engaging with their historic places ranging from First Nations' churches, to near derelict buildings, to grand train stations, and even a towboat and a flying boat!

Heritage BC Executive Director, Kathryn Molloy follows with “All these places and things are rich with Heritage Values and significance for their communities. The only regret is the limited resources the committee could allocate to each project. This year we received requests totaling over $228,000 representing total project costs of over $745,000. These projects are team efforts that need many hands working hard to realize community ambitions of a sustainable historic identity but the many hands are not enough; the fund must be increased over the coming years to help meet the demand.”
